

Practice Problems Related to Molecules

1. The experimentally measured binding energy of the H_2 molecule, compared with two independent H atoms, is 4.75 eV. Could this be because the extra binding energy comes from the effective spring between the two atoms? That is, is the vibrational binding energy comparable to the observed net binding energy?